Welcome to HIST 215 A HISTORY OF WOMEN & GENDER IN EUROPE, 1550-1980

Spring 2014 1550-1980 Office Hours: M, 11-noon; H 10-11am, & by appt.

Cynthia J. Koepp 105 Macmillan, #3224 cjkoepp@wells.edu

 - Course Description : This -course examines the history of -attitudes toward sexuality, experiences of women (and men) ,

and various constructions of gender in Europe from men), and various constructions of gender in Europe from the sixteenth century to the present taking care to distinguish differences attributable to status or social class. Drawing from primary documents, recent historical scholarship, novels, films, and memoirs, we will consider such topics as the legacy of ancient attitudes toward women and sexuality; the evolving definitions of feminine and masculine; the structures of everyday life; working women and women of "leisure" in pre-industrial and industrial Europe; the impact of the French Revolution, WWI, & WWII on women and men and gender definitions, women's quest for education, women's voices in literature and the arts—as well as a variety of women's individual and collective struggles to transform their lives.

The following books are available at the Wells College Bookshop:

Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice Henrik Johan Ibsen, A Doll's House Bonnie Smith, Changing Lives: Women in European History Since 1700 Jeanette Winterson, Oranges are not the Only Fruit

Each student will also read one additional book (a novel or memoire) as part of a group project. Occasionally, short readings and special assignments will be placed on reserve in the library, accessible by the Internet, (such as JSTOR), or handed out in class.

During the term students will be expected to give one or two oral presentations, participate in discussion, take a midterm and a final exam, write one 6-8 page analysis of a novel/memoire with presentation, and each week turn in short responses/discussion questions for the assigned readings that can serve an a basis for discussion. Participation and attendance (15%), response papers (15%), presentations (20%), longer paper (15%), midterm (15%), final exam (20%). Attendance is expected. More than two absences will be detrimental to your grade

Comment [C1]:

Course Objectives:

As a 200-level history course, History 210 aims to improve a student's ability

- to read carefully and analytically, to take meaningful notes, and articulate a response to a given text
- to understand the difference between a primary and secondary source
- to engage with ideas expressed in the assigned readings, films, and the classroom
- to participate in the give-and-take of discussion
- to develop a stronger understanding of grammar and academic prose in order to communicate ideas more effectively

As a history course that looks at women, gender, and sexuality over the long term, History 210 intends to help make students aware

- of the various historical epochs and eras in Europe from mid- 1 $\delta^{\rm th}$ century to the present

- of the ways women's and men's experiences have differed during these various historical moments
- of the ways status or social class influence women's experiences and possibilities
- of the ways attitudes about sexuality and gender have been "socially constructed" over time and what that means
- of how those constructions affect attitudes / perceptions of women and men--and the opportunities open to them
- of the way historical research and historical narrative itself is constructed and how it has undergone change since it has begun to address the history of women, gender, and sexuality
- of the consequences of prejudice and a lack of tolerance toward women and diverse sexual orientations over time
- of women's long battle for political rights, reproductive health care, and work and educational opportunities
- of changing definitions of femininity and masculinity over time
- of women's participation in culture as artists, novelists, and social critics

History 210 also functions to strengthen academic culture, by providing students with opportunities

- to understand what it means to be a part of an academic community that values respect, tolerance, and diversity
- to take risks and move out of comfort zones, by addressing difficult and sensitive issues such as human sexuality, gender discrimination, sexism, classicism, and homophobia as we encounter them throughout history

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY

You are expected to do your own work for this course. Submitting any information or ideas that you acquire from someone else as if they were your own, regardless of their origin (whether it be from printed materials, electronic sources, lectures, friends, etc.) or how they are presented (verbatim or paraphrased, spoken or printed) is plagiarism. The simple solution is to reference honestly and accurately all of your sources. Citing your sources will only make you look smarter. Consult OWL (On Line Writing lab) at Purdue (Lniv. (http://owl.english.purdue.edu) for guidance on how to avoid plagiarism. This site is also an invaluable aid for grammatical and stylistic questions. Your receipt of this syllabus and continuation in this course are your agreement to abide by these standards, which are consistent with and required by the Wells Honor Code (see the General Catalog).

Twelve tips on how to succeed in a course taught by C. J. Koepp

- 1. Come to class (90% of success in life is just showing up.)
- 2. Read before you come to class.
- 3. Think (about the readings/assignments) before you come to class.
- 4. Make notes about what you read and think about so that you will be able to remember your ideas and questions.
- 5. Come with something to say about the day's assignment (bring your comments, questions; keep track of problematic, important, puzzling, or fascinating passages that you think we should consider in our discussion)
- 6. Take notes on our discussions (so that you will remember when them comes time to write a paper or take an exam)
- 7. Do your assignments on time so you can avoid using lame excuses.
- 8. Get enough sleep (so that you don't get sick)
- 9. Wash your hands often (ditto)
- 10. Eat nutritious meals (ditto)
- 11. Exercise often (ditto)
- 12. Expect that this class will be fun and that you will participate.
